Khardah Arms Bust: 15 Firearms, Lakhs in Cash Recovered

MI News Service, Khardah:

In a shocking development, police have uncovered a large cache of weapons and ammunition from an apartment in the Regent Park area of Khardah. Acting on intelligence inputs, the Detective Department of the Barrackpore Police Commissionerate conducted a raid on Monday morning, leading to the recovery of 15 firearms—including both indigenous and foreign-made weapons—and thousands of rounds of live ammunition. A substantial amount of cash running into lakhs was also seized from the premises.

Preliminary investigations reveal that the apartment is occupied by a person identified as Madhusudan Mukherjee. Another individual named Liton has been detained for questioning in connection with the case. Investigators suspect that Madhusudan may have links to an organized criminal network, although officials have declined to comment on the ongoing probe. Local residents expressed disbelief and concern over the discovery. "He always seemed friendly and well-mannered. He used to drive around in his car and interact normally with neighbors. We never imagined something like this could happen here," said one resident. Another added, "He was a tenant. There are many like him living in the area. This incident is deeply disturbing." Political reactions have also begun to pour in. ISF MLA Naushad Siddiqui raised serious concerns about the timing and implications of the incident. "With elections approaching, such incidents are alarming. How did such a large consignment of arms reach Khardah? A thousand rounds of bullets could have meant a thousand lives lost. The State Police Minister must be held accountable," he said. The case has sent shockwaves across the locality, raising questions about public safety and the potential misuse of the weapons. The investigation is currently underway, with police maintaining a cautious silence regarding further details.

Explosion in Jangalmahal Raises Maoist Fears

MI News Service, Jhargram: A suspected bomb explosion on a railway track in the Jangalmahal region has reignited fears of Maoist activity in the area, reminiscent of the unrest witnessed over a decade ago.

On Sunday afternoon, the Bhubaneswar-Delhi Rajdhani Express came to an abrupt halt near Shilai Halt, close to Garbeta Station, following a loud explosion reportedly heard from the rear of the train. Although no injuries were reported, the incident sent shockwaves across the region, especially as it coincided with the final day of the Maoist-declared 'Martyrs' Week—a period historically marked by heightened insurgent activities. According to railway sources, the train guard was the first to report the explosion, promptly alerting the nearest station. Railway and local officials reached the site later that night, with further assessments continuing into Monday morning. A forensic team has collected evidence from the scene to determine the nature and source of the explosion. The incident is being investigated alongside a similar explosion reported on the same day in Sundargarh, Odisha—another area with a known history of Maoist activity. Given the timing and pattern of the blasts, authorities suspect coordinated action by left-wing extremist groups. Local administration officials have refrained from commenting publicly, but intelligence agencies are actively probing the potential revival of Maoist presence in the region. Security has been tightened along key railway routes in West Bengal and Odisha, and surveillance has been intensified in vulnerable areas. As of now, no group has claimed responsibility for the blast. However, the dual explosions on the concluding day of 'Martyrs' Week' are being treated as a serious security concern by both state and central agencies.

State govt has no shortage of fund to provide subsidies to electricity consumers: ABECA

MI News Service, Kolkata: In the wake of the recent announcement by the state government of 80 percent subsidy on electricity for puja committees, ABECA (All Bengal Electricity Consumers Association) General Secretary Subrata Biswas said in a statement ---

"West Bengal being the predominantly agricultural state the tariff of electricity in agricultural sector in West Bengal are the highest in the country. In Tamil Nadu, Telangana, Andhra Pradesh, Punjab, it is completely free, in Karnataka it is free up to 10 KW, and in Haryana, agricultural electricity consumers get electricity at a price of 10 paise per unit. The minimum charge for small industries has been set at Rs 200 per KVA per month, which has led to the closure of about 50 percent of wheat mills, husking mills and other small industries in the state. Households are provided free electricity up to 300 units in Punjab, 200 units in Delhi, 200 units in Karnataka, and 100 units in Tamil Nadu and Telangana. And in case of West Bengal household consumers have to pay a minimum of Rs 5 and a maximum of Rs 9.22 per unit of electricity consumption. The recent announcement of an 80 percent subsidy on electricity to Durga Puja committees proves that the state government actually has no shortage of fund to provide subsidies to electricity consumers. Then why won't the state government provide subsidies to save agriculture and small industries in West Bengal? Why won't the government provide free electricity up to 200 units to households?"

Stitches on Baby's Head After C-Section Sparks Uproar

MI News Service, Cooch Behar: Tension gripped Dinhat Sub-Divisional Hospital on Sunday after a newborn sustained a head injury during a cesarean delivery, sparking outrage among family members and prompting a police complaint. The incident took place when Beauty Khatun, a resident of Bara Sholmari Gram Panchayat in Dinhat, was admitted to the hospital late Saturday night with labor pains. She underwent a cesarean section around noon on Sunday.

However, what should have been a moment of joy for the family quickly turned into shock and confusion. According to family members, hospital staff were initially reluctant to show them the newborn after delivery, raising concerns. Under persistent pressure from the family, the baby was eventually brought forward—revealing a large, stitched wound on the infant's forehead, which had been covered in bandages. The sight left the family stunned, and heated protests erupted within the hospital premises. The newborn's father, Salam Miah, lodged a formal complaint at Dinhat Police Station, following which police personnel arrived at the hospital to bring the situation under control. Hospital sources confirmed that the injury occurred during the surgical procedure. They stated that the mother's condition was critical at the time of delivery, and in the course of the operation, a surgical instrument may have inadvertently grazed the newborn's forehead, resulting in a cut that required two stitches. Both the mother and child are reported to be stable and under observation. However, the hospital authorities have not made any official statement on the matter so far. The incident has raised serious concerns regarding surgical protocols and patient safety during delivery procedures in government-run healthcare facilities. The family has demanded accountability and a thorough investigation into the circumstances surrounding the injury.

Body carried on banana raft amid flooding, sparks political controversy

MI News Service, Ghatat: A heart-wrenching image from flood-affected Ghatat has stirred both political tensions and public outrage after a deceased woman's body was transported to the crematorium on a banana raft due to extreme waterlogging in the area.

The incident occurred in guise of the master plan," he said. In response, Ajit Maity, president of Trinamool Congress's Ghatat organizational district, defended the act by referring to local customs. "The family used a boat to reach the crematorium, and then followed a traditional practice by placing the body on a banana raft before final Ward No. 9 of Ghatat Municipality. Manasa Chowdhury, the widow of late ward councillor Kanhaiyalal Chowdhury, passed away shortly after midnight on Sunday. With the entire area submerged, conventional transport to the crematorium was impossible. The family resorted to floating the body across floodwaters on a banana raft—the only available means to reach the cremation ground located at a distance. The poignant image quickly went viral, prompting swift reactions. BJP MLA Sheetal Kapat strongly criticized the ruling government, questioning the preparedness of civic authorities and alleging negligence. "Even after so many years, the electric crematorium remains incomplete. What development has happened in Ghatat Municipality? Crores are being looted under the rites," he explained. Residents, however, expressed growing frustration. With large swathes of areas like Panna and Ghisora Panchayats under water, locals are relying solely on ferries or makeshift dinghies to move around. Many have questioned whether such methods are genuinely customary or simply a consequence of inadequate infrastructure and disaster response. The incident has brought attention to longstanding civic issues in the region, particularly the unfinished electric crematorium, lack of drainage systems, and ineffective flood management despite repeated promises of a Ghatat master plan. As floodwaters continue to impact daily life, the image of a body floating to its final rites on a banana raft remains a powerful reminder of the human cost of infrastructural neglect.

Arambagh Residents Battle Monsoon Mud as Road Conditions Worsen

MI News Service, Arambagh: With continuous rainfall over the past two months, the deteriorating condition of roads in Purba Keshabpur village under Malaypur 2 Panchayat in Arambagh has brought daily life to a standstill for many residents. The stretch of road, approximately two kilometers long, has become nearly impassable, especially affecting schoolchildren, patients, and working villagers. Knee-deep mud, large potholes, and waterlogged pathways are now part of the daily commute for locals in Hazrapara and Bauripara. Villagers report that essential services like ambulances avoid the area due to the road's condition, further complicating emergencies.

Mana Hazra, a resident of the village, said, "It has been raining constantly. This is our only road to the outside world. If someone falls sick, we cannot even reach the hospital. We desperately need a usable road." Another resident shared the impact on education and livelihoods: "Children walk through mud to get to school. People can't reach work, and pregnant women can't get to hospitals safely. This is a basic need." Rina Santra, a local woman, added, "We received bicycles to help our children reach school. But where are the roads? How can they ride in knee-deep mud?" Despite past assurances, residents say the condition of the road has remained unchanged for over six years. They are now calling for urgent intervention to ensure year-round accessibility and safe passage, especially during the monsoon. Local authorities have acknowledged the situation and have assured that steps will be taken to address the concerns. However, residents remain hopeful that this time, promises will translate into action.

Crops damage in heavy rains causes vegetable prices to skyrocket in Kolkata markets

MI News Service, Kolkata: Continuous rains over West Bengal, coupled with the slowing down of the supply chain, have led to prices of vegetables skyrocketing in Kolkata markets, as well as in several other cities and towns across districts.

In Kolkata markets, a cauliflower, which was being sold at Rs 30 a few days ago, is now being sold at Rs 50 to 60. Pointed gourd is being sold at least Rs 50 per kg, as against Rs 30 a few days back. A large-sized brinjal is being sold at Rs 100 per kg, while being sold at Rs 60 some days back.

Farmers' associations and West Bengal Task Force members blamed the phenomenon on a prolonged spell of heavy rain, which damaged locally produced crops.

State task force member Rabinranath Kolay, however, claimed that the prices

Bishnupur Worker Freed from Detention in Nagpur!

MI News Service, Bishnupur: In a dramatic turn of events, Babai Sardar, a migrant worker from Bishnupur's Pariyai area, who was reportedly detained in Nagpur on suspicion of being an illegal Bangladeshi immigrant, has been released following swift intervention by Trinamool Congress MP Abhishek Banerjee.

The family of Babai Sardar, who had migrated to Mumbai three years ago in search of employment and worked there as a security guard, lost contact with him on July 25. On Sunday, they received a distressing call informing them that he had been detained under suspicion of being a Bangladeshi national. The incident sparked concern among local residents and political leaders alike. Acting on the family's appeal, Abhishek Banerjee instructed a Trinamool Congress delegation, along with a team from the Diamond Harbour Police, to rush to Mumbai to locate the missing worker. It was later confirmed that Babai was being held in a detention camp in Nagpur. The family quickly submitted documents including his birth certificate, voter ID card, and his secondary school admit card to establish his Indian citizenship. According to his family, Babai's grandfather was born in India in 1936, and the family has lived in Julpia, West Bengal, for several decades. Following the submission of these documents and rising political pressure, Babai was released late Sunday evening. His father, Debu Sardar, expressed gratitude toward the local MLA and MP, saying, "We are thankful to the authorities for bringing our son back. But we are deeply disturbed that speaking Bengali alone can lead to such a fate." This incident comes amid increasing concerns over the racial profiling of Bengali-speaking migrant workers in various parts of India. Several other workers from Bengal are also reported to have faced similar treatment in Mumbai in recent times. The family has now decided they no longer want Babai to seek employment outside Bengal, fearing a repeat of this traumatic experience.

Abandoned Hooghly School Turns Into Booze Den!

MI News Service, Hooghly: A disturbing scene has emerged from the once-functional Benepukur Shibtala Upper Primary School in Pandugram, Goghat, where the abandoned premises have reportedly turned into a hotspot for anti-social activities. Liquor bottles, plastic glasses, and signs of drug abuse now litter a classroom once meant for Class 5 students, highlighting the neglect and decay of the education infrastructure in rural West Bengal.

The school, officially closed a year ago due to a shortage of teaching staff, now lies in a state of disrepair. What was once a place of learning has transformed into an unsafe environment where livestock roam freely, and the premises are used for storing household fuel and other waste materials.

Local residents report that the building, which had only one sanctioned teacher before closure, gradually became non-functional. Community volunteers and a few unemployed youths had tried to keep the school running, but their efforts collapsed after the lone government-appointed teacher retired. Students were subsequently shifted to a school located several kilometers away. "There was just one teacher managing all the classes. After his retirement, the government decided to close the school officially. Since then, this building has become a dump yard. We sometimes hear noises from inside, and find people misusing the space," said a local villager. Locals are now urging the state government to take urgent action. "We are mostly poor families here. We can't afford private schools. If the government doesn't reopen the school or provide an alternative nearby, our children will be deprived of basic education," said another resident.

The head of the local gram panchayat acknowledged the situation and confirmed that the school had been closed due to staffing issues. However, no clarity has been given on whether the building will be secured or repurposed in the near future. As concerns grow over children's safety and rising substance abuse in the abandoned facility, villagers hope that their pleas will prompt authorities to restore the school to its original purpose—education.

Man dies after being denied food due to lack aadhaar

MI News Service, Bakura: A 65-year-old man from Kumidya village in Bankura Block No. 1 has died after months of reported hardship and food insecurity, allegedly triggered by his inability to access government welfare schemes due to not having an Aadhaar card.

The deceased, Baidyanath Das Modak, had worked for years at a local sweet shop. However, due to old age and illness, he was unable to continue working for more than a year. With no source of income and no access to government support schemes such as old-age pensions or ration provisions, Baidyanath reportedly survived on sparse meals, often going hungry. He lived with his wife, Kalpana, and their only son, Somnath, a migrant laborer who could scarcely support his family on his limited earnings. The family did not have Aadhaar cards, which made them ineligible for several government schemes, including ration entitlements, which had reportedly been stopped due to lack of Aadhaar-linkage. "My father could not eat regularly. We have tried many times to get Aadhaar cards, but were unsuccessful. Without it, we were not eligible for rations or allowances," said Somnath Das Modak. Despite efforts from local neighbors who occasionally provided assistance, the family's struggles continued. Baidyanath passed away at home on Friday, with residents claiming food insecurity contributed to his death. His widow, Kalpana, added, "We don't have Aadhaar cards. That means we don't have rations. I haven't eaten properly since morning." This tragic incident sheds light on the critical gap in access to welfare in remote areas where digital documentation like Aadhaar is now a prerequisite for most essential services. Villagers and social workers in the area emphasized the urgent need for simplified, inclusive processes to ensure that no individual is denied the right to basic sustenance. The case highlights the importance of expanding reach, awareness, and accessibility of identity documentation and welfare enrollment—especially for the elderly, ill, and economically vulnerable living in rural and isolated regions.

Three Nigerian nationals arrested in Rs 1.10 cr cyber fraud
MI News Service, Kolkata: In a major breakthrough, Kolkata Police has uncovered a multi-crore cyber fraud operation and arrested three Nigerian nationals from Delhi for duping a victim of 1.10 crore. The accused allegedly impersonated representatives of the World Health Organization (WHO) and Abbott Pharmaceuticals UK, using the pretext of kola nut trading to lure their target into the scam. According to police sources, the fraudsters created fake email IDs, WhatsApp accounts, and forged documents to carry out the operation. They promised enormous profits to the victim in exchange for investments in an international kola nut trading deal. The accused used foreign WhatsApp numbers and Nigerian IP addresses to appear legitimate and to mask their actual location. However, investigations revealed that the entire racket was being orchestrated from Delhi. A coordinated police raid was conducted in the early hours of August 2 in the Nilothi area of Delhi, leading to the arrest of the three accused. During the operation, police seized 12 Android smartphones, 3 keypad phones, a laptop, impersonation, social engineering, and digital deception. Officials say the suspects had been operating for an extended period and may be linked to similar fraud cases across the country. The accused are currently being interrogated for further leads, including identifying potential accomplices and victims. This incident highlights a growing trend of international cyber fraud rings targeting Indian individuals and businesses by misusing trusted global brand names and institutions. Kolkata Police has urged citizens to remain cautious of unsolicited offers promising high returns, especially those involving foreign contacts and digital communications through unofficial channels. The arrests mark a significant victory in the fight against cybercrime and underscore the need for continued vigilance and technological readiness to combat evolving digital threats.

Mamata blames DVC for flood crisis in Bengal, alleges deliberate negligence

MI News Service, Kolkata: As relentless rainfall continues to batter West Bengal, the situation has worsened with massive water releases from the Damodar Valley Corporation (DVC), submerging large parts of the state. West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee has once again held the DVC responsible for the devastation, calling it a "man-made disaster" and accusing the central government-run body of being increasingly "anti-Bengal." Taking to her official social media account, Mamata presented alarming statistics: DVC has released 11 times more water in 2025 compared to 2024, and 30 times more than in 2023 during the same June-July period. She stated that this unprecedented release of water has ravaged South Bengal—damaging embankments, roads, agricultural lands, and forcing thousands from their homes. Mamata wrote: "DVC's so-called 'flood control' has once again drowned Bengal. Its failure this time is not just worse than previous years—it is unprecedented. Clearly, under the central government's influence, this agency is becoming more and more anti-Bengal. The flood-like situation is not natural. This is a man-made disaster aimed at destabilizing Bengal." She went on to allege a "deep conspiracy" behind the repeated and unannounced water releases by DVC, demanding immediate cessation of such actions.

The data she shared paints a stark picture: Water released by DVC in June-July 2024: 4,535 lakh cubic meters and Water released in the same period in 2025: 50,287 lakh cubic meters.

The result has been catastrophic flooding in districts like Howrah, Hooghly, both 24 Parganas, East and West Midnapore (especially Ghatal). Entire villages lie submerged, thousands have been evacuated, and essential supplies of food and drinking water are being managed by local authorities.

Mamata further criticized DVC for repeatedly releasing water without prior intimation, increasing volumes at will and leaving residents in the lurch. Despite having issued formal letters of concern to DVC, she claims there has been no meaningful response or resolution.

The Chief Minister has demanded immediate central intervention, stating that such indiscriminate actions are "disastrous and deeply worrying for Bengal's future."

Abhishek Banerjee warns against NRC notices, gears up TMC for 2026 polls

MI News Service, Kolkata: With the 2026 Assembly elections fast approaching, political fervor is intensifying across West Bengal. Every major party has begun to consolidate its ground game, eyeing constituencies as proverbial bull's-eyes. Amidst this escalating political momentum, Trinamool Congress (TMC) National General Secretary Abhishek Banerjee convened a critical organisational meeting on Monday, focusing on party leadership in the Cooch Behar and Alipurduar districts. Held at the party's Camac Street office, the meeting underscored both strategic realignments and urgent directives. Among the most unequivocal was Banerjee's instruction regarding NRC (National Register of Citizens) notices issued by the Assam government. "No one is to accept those notices. No one is to go to Assam. This is the party's unequivocal stand," he declared.

The firm stance comes in response to multiple reports over recent days of residents in North Bengal receiving NRC-related notices from Assam authorities. Banerjee's assertion reflects the party's intent to counter any political or administrative encroachment on its voter base, particularly in sensitive border districts. Party insiders reveal that the meeting also addressed key grassroots restructuring. Several recommendations for block-level reshuffles were discussed and have reportedly been forwarded to Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee for final approval. The leadership emphasized the importance of organisational discipline ahead of the elections, reiterating that negligence in assigned duties would not be tolerated. A significant portion of the meeting was also devoted to the party's flagship community outreach programme, 'Amader Para, Amader Kormosuchi' (Our Neighborhood, Our Programme). Detailed strategies were laid out for its implementation, designed to reinforce TMC's direct connect with citizens and ensure accountability across all levels of the party machinery. As the political temperature continues to rise in Bengal, Monday's meeting sends a clear message — the Trinamool Congress is not only battle-ready but is taking an assertive stance on both administrative overreach and internal reorganisation. With Abhishek Banerjee at the helm of campaign preparations, the party appears focused, firm, and fiercely protective of its constituencies.

No bar on appointment of primary teachers as BLOs, rules Cal HC

MI News Service, Kolkata: In a significant ruling, Justice Amrita Sinha of the Calcutta High Court on Monday clarified that there is no legal impediment to appointing primary school teachers as Booth Level Officers (BLOs). Dismissing a petition filed against such appointments, the court stated that the duties for the concerned petitioners had not yet been clearly assigned and therefore the matter does not warrant intervention. The case was brought forward by a group of primary teachers who opposed their deployment as BLOs, claiming the nature of the work—door-to-door data collection, electoral roll revision, and campaign activities—would interfere with their academic responsibilities. Their counsel, Subir Senal, argued that these tasks are being scheduled on non-working days, including Sundays, and that teachers are being given assignments without a clear timeline or scope. "Is this a daily task? Can the Election Commission impose it just because they have the authority?" he questioned during the hearing. Representing the Election Commission, advocate Soumya Majumdar explained that BLOs gather voter data at the grassroots level and their appointments are done in coordination with school authorities. "Not every teacher is being called. This is the first time the draft electoral roll is being prepared six months before elections," he added. After hearing arguments from both sides, Justice Sinha remarked, "The nature of duties has not been specified yet. Why are the petitioners presuming it will be full-time work? The law clearly allows primary teachers to be appointed as BLOs. The nation expects this duty to be fulfilled. What difficulty is there in working on a Sunday?" She also questioned whether students are attending school regularly enough to warrant such strong opposition from teachers, subtly hinting at a disparity between claimed academic pressure and ground reality. With these observations, Justice Sinha disposed of the petition and ruled that there shall be no obstruction to the appointment of primary teachers as BLOs. The verdict reinforces the authority of the Election Commission to utilise government staff, including teachers, in electoral processes and underlines the civic responsibility of educators beyond classroom duties.

MI News Service, Kolkata: Amid rising political and cultural tensions over the alleged mislabeling of Bengali as a "Bangladeshi language" by Delhi Police, Bengali superstar Prosenjit Chatterjee has broken his silence — affirming his deep-rooted pride in his mother tongue. "Bangla bhashachhilo, ache, arthakbe," he declared. "The Bengali language was, is, and will always be." His statement comes as a powerful cultural assertion at a time when identity politics is at the forefront in West Bengal. The controversy began after Delhi Police reportedly referred to Bengali as "Bangladeshi" in a letter sent to BangaBhavan, seeking a translator for seized documents. The phrasing sparked fury from Trinamool Congress and Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee, who denounced it as an insult to the people of Bengal. Prosenjit's comment resonates even more due to a past controversy. During a Mumbai press event, he had jokingly questioned the need to speak Bengali — a moment that drew backlash. Reflecting on that, he clarified: "I never meant to disrespect my language. I was misunderstood." Now, with conviction, he says, "If we must fight for our language, we all will." A cultural icon has made his stand — clear and unwavering.

Kolkata Police warns tourists of cyber fraud in luxury hotel booking scams

MI News Service, Kolkata: With less than two months to go before the festive Durga Puja season, cyber fraudsters have launched a sophisticated scam operation targeting travel enthusiasts. Their method is deceptively simple—posing as luxury hotel agents, they contact unsuspecting travellers by phone under the pretext of facilitating exclusive bookings, only to dupe them of large sums of money. According to Kolkata Police's Detective Department, this isn't the first time such incidents have occurred. Similar frauds have previously been reported in tourist hotspots like Puri, where multiple travellers lost significant amounts during fraudulent hotel booking attempts. One recent victim from Parnasree, intending to book a hotel in Puri for 7,000, ended up losing 70,000. The scam, now dubbed by police as the "Online Five-Star Scam," has reportedly expanded beyond domestic destinations to include international hotel bookings.

MI News Service, Kolkata: In a decisive move to curb arbitrary alterations of key personal information, the West Bengal Health Department has issued a strict directive regarding birth and death certificates. According to the newly released guidelines, individuals will no longer be allowed to make changes to names, dates, or familial details at will. All such modifications will now require official scrutiny and the express approval of the local registrar. The directive states that only minor typographical errors—such as misspellings in names, birthplaces, or dates—may be corrected. However, significant changes like altering the full name, changing the date of birth, or modifying a parent's identity will no longer be permitted under any circumstance. Even in cases of divorce, a child's father's name cannot be removed from the birth certificate, nor can a new spouse's name be added in the event of a mother's remarriage.

Indian fishing trawler with 14 crew members detained by BD Coast Guard

However, shortly after reaching open waters that same evening, the vessel's engine malfunctioned, leaving it stranded and adrift. Carried by ocean currents, the trawler inadvertently crossed into Bangladeshi maritime territory. The Bangladesh Coast Guard intercepted the vessel in the early hours of Saturday night and detained both the trawler and the fishermen. The 14 Indian nationals are currently being held at the Mongla fishing harbour in Bangladesh. The Incident has triggered significant anxiety across coastal communities in West Bengal. Families of the detained fishermen are distressed, with many having lost contact with their loved ones for several days. One fisherman's wife shared, "My husband left five days ago to catch fish. Since then, we had no information. Now I've heard he's in Bangladesh. I have small children and no idea how we'll manage."

World University Games 2025: KIIT's Medal-Winning Athletes Felicitated

MI News Service, Bhubaneswar: KIIT & KISS felicitated 11 athletes from KIIT University who represented India in various sporting events and won medals at the recently concluded World University Games (WUG) 2025 in Rhine-Ruhr, Germany.

KIIT is the first university in India to have won so many medals in WUG in the last 65 years.

Each athlete who won a silver medal at the WUG received a cash prize of Rs 3 lakh from KIIT and KISS, while bronze medal winners were awarded Rs 1 lakh. The awards were presented by Dr. Achyuta Samanta, Founder of KIIT & KISS, in the presence of several sporting personalities, including Olympians.

Expressing his delight over the achievement, Dr. Samanta said that the highest number of players in the Indian contingent at the World University Games were from KIIT. India secured a total of 12 medals in the event, with KIIT athletes contributing 6 of them. This accomplishment is a matter of pride for both KIIT-KISS and Odisha, he added. He also highlighted that KIIT is the first Indian university to win the highest number of medals at the World University Games in the past 65 years.

Three KIIT students — Ankita in the 3000m Steeplechase, Praveen Chithraval in the Triple Jump, and Seeman in the 5000m Final — each won silver medals. Additionally, the Men's 4x100m Relay Team, the Women's 20km Race Walk Team, and Avinash Mohanty in Badminton secured bronze medals.

KIIT University showcased its sporting excellence across various events. In the Men's 4x100m Relay, Sahkanth Hoblidhar, Animesh Kujur, Lalu Prasad Bhoi, and Matyam Jayaram Dandapati won bronze medals. In the Women's 20km Race Walk Team event, Munipat Rajpathi, Mansi Negi, and Sejal Anilisingh walked in unison to clinch bronze. Avinash Mohanty also contributed with a bronze medal in Badminton, bringing KIIT's total medal tally to six.

Among others, Prof. Shanranjit Singh, Vice Chancellor of KIIT-DU; Registrar Prof. J. R. Mohanty; and Dr. Gaganendu Dash, Director General of the Sports and Yogic Sciences School, were present at the ceremony. Olympians Dutee Chand, Srabani Nanda, Amiya Mallick, Shradhanjali Samant, and Bhavani Devi also graced the occasion.

NITI Aayog member pitches for accelerating India's transition to electric mobility

MI News Service, New Delhi: NITI Aayog Member Rajiv Gauba has made a strong pitch for accelerating India's transition to electric mobility while also laying thrust on boosting production of rare earth elements in the country and leveraging the country's untapped potential in the sector.

Speaking at the launch of 'Unlocking a $200 Billion Opportunity: Electric Vehicles in India | India Electric Mobility Index (IEMI) 2024,' Gauba highlighted the emerging rare earth magnet issue as both a challenge and an opportunity. "World over, people are now exploring other sources, working on other innovative technologies," he said, noting that the Centre has launched a critical mineral mission to address these concerns.

Gauba stressed that India possesses large reserves of rare earth minerals, but there is an urgent need to "rapidly explore, survey, mine and process them."

This domestic capability could significantly reduce India's dependence on imports for critical EV components.

The NITI Aayog member acknowledged that India's adoption of electric vehicles remains slower compared to US, China and the European Union but outlined specific strategies to accelerate the transition.

One key recommendation involves targeting large institutional buyers. Gauba suggested that the government should persuade major organisations, including the Ministry of Defence, central police forces, and maharatna companies, to purchase only electric vehicles when replacing their existing fleets.

"Large organisations, government departments, and public sector undertakings, which have a large fleet of buses and cars, should lead by example," he emphasised, noting this could create substantial market demand.

The NITI Aayog member identified several bottlenecks hindering widespread EV adoption, including concerns about battery range and charging infrastructure. He pointed to the lack of a unified app for locating charging stations and booking slots as a significant user experience issue.

Cost remains another major barrier, with Gauba highlighting that high fixed charges levied by distribution companies make charging costs expensive for many users.

Gauba advocated for a more targeted approach, emphasising the need for region-specific and city-specific strategies. He highlighted that trucks and buses, while constituting only 4 per cent of all vehicles, contribute to 50% of transportation emissions.

"Therefore there is an alternate need to tackle this segment," he said, suggesting that focusing on commercial vehicles could yield disproportionate environmental benefits.

Gauba said electric mobility is also a significant economic opportunity. He argued that the transition could "significantly reduce our dependence on imported fossil fuels, lower the cost of transportation, and help our cities reclaim the air."

The NITI Aayog member emphasized the potential for job creation and industrial development, noting that electric mobility can "catalyze a new way of manufacturing, innovation and employment, from battery production and vehicle assembly to charging infrastructure and digital solutions."

"Monsters are born out of hunger and unemployment...": Sanjay Raut

MI News Service, New Delhi: Shiv Sena (UBT) leader Sanjay Raut on Monday emphasised the role of socio-economic factors in breeding extremism and terrorism. According to Raut, hunger, poverty, and unemployment are the root causes of individuals turning to crime. He asserted that governments are responsible for creating an environment that fosters such behaviour.

"As long as there is hunger in a country, devils will be born... Monsters are born out of hunger and unemployment... A person becomes a thief due to hunger and the need for survival... In the world, wherever there is hunger and poverty, people have taken up arms. They can either be called terrorists, Naxalites, Maoists and any other names based on religion... It is there in our country, Syria, Russia, and most in Pakistan. It is the government that creates monsters..." said Raut.

The remarks came amid the debate over the term 'safron terror', which continues after the verdict in the Malegaon blasts case, with the court saying that the prosecution failed to establish the case beyond a reasonable doubt.

He claimed that poor people are often exploited in the name of religion, leading to the creation of "monsters" like Ajmal Kasab, the perpetrator of the 2008 Mumbai terror attacks.

Raut suggested that if Pakistan had provided education and taken steps against poverty, Kasab might not have become a terrorist and emphasised that governments are responsible for addressing these socioeconomic issues to prevent the rise of extremism.

"Kasab would not have been born in Pakistan if there had been education and if steps had been taken against poverty. Poor people are exploited in the name of religion, and monsters are born. Kasab is one of them. There are more such people here, too..." added the Shiv Sena (UBT) Rajya Sabha member.

Kalyan Banerjee steps down as TMC's Lok Sabha Chief Whip

MI News Service, New Delhi/Kolkata: In a surprise move All India Trinamool Congress (AITC) MP Kalyan Banerjee on Monday stepped down as the party's Chief Whip in the Lok Sabha.

Kalyan Banerjee announced his resignation after attending a virtual meeting of TMC MPs, chaired by party supremo and West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee. The virtual meeting was attended by TMC MPs from both the Lok Sabha and the Rajya Sabha.

As per the MP, the party president had pointed out that there is a lack of coordination among party MPs in Parliament.

"I have quit as the party's chief whip in Lok Sabha, as 'didi' (West Bengal CM Mamata Banerjee) said during the virtual meeting that there is a lack of coordination among party MPs. So the blame is on me. Hence, I have decided to step down," the four-time MP from Sreerampur in Hooghly district has said.

"The development came amid his latest feud with TMC's Krishnanagar MP Mahua Moitra.

His frequent run-ins with Moitra and a public spat with former cricketer and party MP Kirti Azad had earlier embarrassed the party. Meanwhile, the TMC has named its National General Secretary Abhishek Banerjee as its leader in the lower house of Parliament. Abhishek Banerjee, a three-time MP from Diamond Harbour, will replace veteran lawmaker from Kolkata Uttar Sudip Bandopadhyay, who was relieved of the responsibility because of his poor health.

Delhi govt tables bill to curb commercialisation of education, regulate private school fees

MI News Service, New Delhi: Education Minister Ashish Sood on Monday tabled the "Delhi School Education (Transparency in Fixation and Regulation of Fees), Bill, 2025" in the Delhi Assembly, stating that the legislation seeks to end commercialisation of education and take action against those exploiting it for profit.

The proposed law aims to regulate the arbitrary fee hikes by private schools in the national capital, providing relief to lakhs of students and their families.

"Education is not a thing to be sold. This bill aims to halt the commercialisation of education. We are bringing the bill to take action against those mafias who are selling education..." Sood said while tabling the bill.

The Bill was tabled on the first day of the Monsoon session of the Eighth Legislative Assembly, which commenced on Monday and will continue until August 8. However, the session may be extended depending on the exigencies of legislative business.

In a separate statement, the Delhi Education Minister said, "Today, I have come here with a permanent solution to the problems faced by millions of parents and children in Delhi, and to a legacy issue that has been ignored for decades."

Sood stated that education is "a sacred duty -- a duty we must fulfil for the progress and prosperity of our motherland." He emphasised that the aim of education should not be 'earning', but rather 'learning' and nation-building.

"This bill is a small effort on our part to honour Dr.

Mukherjee's vision and to ensure that education does not become a burden on the people of India, but instead becomes a path leading them to a better future," he said.

Giving historical references, he discussed how the central government has resolved long-standing legacy issues over the decades, such as the Ram Mandir, Chenab Bridge, Article 370, and electrification of every village.

He stated that the Delhi government is now also "focused on resolving the capital's old and complex issues, one of the most important legacy issues being the continuously rising fees of private schools."

"This is not a recent problem, but a question that has troubled Delhi's parents for many decades," he clarified.

He mentioned the declining quality of the government education system over the past years, the significant shortage of schools, and how increasing private school fees have caused financial and mental difficulties for parents.

Taking a jab at previous governments, he said, "Earlier governments repeatedly issued only namesake orders -- but they either feared or colluded with education mafias... There were neither audits nor records; everything was run on an ad-hoc basis."

He stated that during its tenure, the (AAP) government built only 20 new schools, while approvals for other schools were granted during previous administrations.

Punjab becomes 1st state to empanel sign language experts under Juvenile Justice Act

MI News Service, Chandigarh : Punjab has become the first state in India to empanel sign language interpreters, translators, and special educators under the Juvenile Justice Act, 2015 to ensure accessible and sensitive justice for all, particularly children with hearing and speech impairments.

The announcement was made by Dr Baljit Kaur, Minister for Social Security, Women and Child Development. These experts will be deployed district-wise to provide support services to children in need.

This landmark step, undertaken under the leadership of Chief Minister Bhagwant Mann, is designed to empower children with special needs by eliminating communication barriers in legal, educational, and daily life settings. The move is also aligned with the provisions of the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) Act, 2012.

Dr Kaur said the empanelled professionals will support children during court proceedings and other official matters, thereby promoting fair, impartial, and sensitive outcomes.

She emphasised that the initiative reflects the state government's strong commitment to building an inclusive society where every child, regardless of ability, feels heard, understood, and protected.

The Professionals will be deployed across districts and compensated in accordance with the relevant legal provisions. Their timely assistance will be ensured in both routine and urgent cases involving children with special needs.

Highlighting Punjab's pioneering approach to inclusive governance, the Minister noted that the state has already taken a significant step by broadcasting proceedings of the Punjab Vidhan Sabha in sign language--an effort aimed at improving accessibility for the speech and hearing impaired.

This latest initiative further strengthens the government's mission of removing systemic barriers and ensuring equal participation for all. It marks a major milestone in the state's ongoing efforts to uphold the rights and dignity of children with disabilities and promote justice that is both accessible and compassionate.

Why is exercise so important for seniors?

Whether you were once much more physically active or have never been one to exercise regularly, now is a great time to start an exercise and fitness regimen. Getting and staying in shape is just as important for seniors as it is for younger people. Why is exercise important for older people? Getting your heart rate up and challenging your muscles benefits virtually every system in your body, and improves your physical and mental health in myriad ways. Physical activity helps maintain a healthy blood pressure, keeps harmful plaque from building up in your arteries, reduces inflammation, improves blood sugar levels, strengthens bones, and helps stave off depression. In addition, a regular exercise program can make your sex life better, lead to better quality sleep, reduce your risk of some cancers, and is linked to longer life. Many older adults hesitate to get moving because they're unfamiliar with the types of exercise and fitness that are effective and safe, and aren't sure how much exercise they need to do. The good news is that any kind of movement is better than being sedentary, so there's nothing wrong with starting small and working your way up to longer workouts. Your goal should be no less than 150 minutes of moderate-intensity activity per week, but if you can't start at that level, work up to it (and then past it). While there are many dedicated forms of exercise and fitness for adults, you also want to stay physically active throughout the day by taking the stairs, doing yard work, and playing with your grandkids. When it comes to exercise and fitness for seniors, most can begin without consulting a doctor — but there are exceptions. If you have a major health condition like diabetes, high blood pressure, heart or lung disease, osteoporosis, or a neurological disease, definitely talk to your doctor first. People with mobility issues such as poor balance or arthritis should also get advice from their doctor.

Do you know what happens in brain while daydreaming?

TORONTO [CANADA] : A study led by Harvard Medical School researchers is one step closer to understanding what happens in the brain during daydreaming.

The findings of the mouse study were published in Nature.

The researchers monitored the activity of neurons in the visual cortex of mouse brains while the animals were awake and silent. They discovered that these neurons occasionally activated in a fashion similar to that seen when a mouse gazed at a real image, suggesting that the mouse was thinking—or daydreaming—about the image.

Furthermore, activity patterns during a mouse's first few daydreams of the day indicated how the brain's response to the image would develop over time.

The study presented tantalising, if preliminary, evidence that daydreams can influence the brain's future response to what it perceives.

The authors noted that further study is needed to establish this causal association, but the findings provide an intriguing hint that daydreaming during peaceful waking may play a role in brain plasticity, or the brain's ability to rebuild itself in response to new experiences.

"We wanted to know how this daydreaming process occurred on a neurobiological level and whether these moments of quiet reflection could be important for learning and memory," said lead author Nghia Nguyen, a Ph.D. student in neurobiology at the Blavatnik Institute at HMS.

Scientists have spent considerable time studying how neurons replay past events to form memories and map the physical environment in the hippocampus, a seahorse-shaped brain region that plays a key role in memory and spatial navigation.

By contrast, there has been little research on the replay of neurons in other brain regions, including the visual cortex. Such efforts would provide valuable insights about how visual memories are formed.

"My lab became interested in whether we could record from enough neurons in the visual cortex to understand what exactly the mouse is remembering—and then connect that information to brain plasticity," said senior author Mark Andermann, professor of medicine at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Centre and professor of neurobiology at HMS.

In the new study, the researchers repeatedly showed mice one of two images, each consisting of a different checkerboard pattern of grey and dappled black and white squares. Between images, the mice spent a minute looking at a grey screen. The team simultaneously recorded activity from around 7,000 neurons in the visual cortex. The researchers found that when a mouse looked at an image, the neurons fired in a specific pattern, and the patterns were different enough to discern image one from image two. More importantly, when a mouse looked at the grey screen between images, the neurons sometimes fired in a similar, but not identical, pattern, as when the mouse looked at the image, a sign that it was daydreaming about the image.

These daydreams occurred only when mice were relaxed, characterized by calm behavior and small pupils.

Unsurprisingly, mice daydreamed more about the most recent image and they had more daydreams at the beginning of the day than at the end, when they had already seen each image dozens of times.

Throughout the day and across days, the activity patterns seen when the mice looked at the images changed—what neuroscientists call "representational drift."

Yet this drift wasn't random. Over time, the patterns associated with the images became even more different from each other, until each involved an almost entirely separate set of neurons.

Notably, the pattern seen during a mouse's first few daydreams about an image predicted what the pattern would become when the mouse looked at the image later.

"There's drift in how the brain responds to the same image over time, and these early daydreams can predict where the drift is going," Andermann said.

Finally, the researchers found that the visual cortex daydreams occurred at the same time as replay activity occurred in the hippocampus, suggesting that the two brain regions were communicating during these daydreams.

Based on the results of the study, the researchers suspect that these daydreams may be actively involved in brain plasticity.

"When you see two different images many times, it becomes important to discriminate between them. Our findings suggest that daydreaming may guide this process by steering the neural patterns associated with the two images away from each other," Nguyen said while noting that this relationship needs to be confirmed.

Nguyen added that learning to differentiate between the images should help the mouse respond to each image with more specificity in the future.

These observations align with a growing body of evidence in rodents and humans that entering a state of quiet wakefulness after an experience can improve learning and memory.

Next, the researchers plan to use their imaging tools to visualise the connections between individual neurons in the visual cortex and to examine how these connections change when the brain "sees" an image.

"We were chasing this 99 percent of unexplored brain activity and discovered that there's so much richness in the visual cortex that nobody knew anything about," Andermann said. Whether daydreams in people involve similar activity patterns in the visual cortex is an open question, and the answer will require additional experiments. However, there is preliminary evidence that an analogous process occurs in humans when they recall visual imagery. Randy Buckner, the Soslund Family Professor of Psychology and Neuroscience at Harvard University, has shown that brain activity in the visual cortex increases when people are asked to recall an image in detail. Other studies have recorded fluctuations in electrical activity in the visual cortex and the hippocampus during such recalls.

For the researchers, the results of their study and others suggest that it may be important to make space for moments of quiet waking that lead to daydreams. For a mouse, this may mean taking a pause from looking at a series of images, and for a human, this could mean taking a break from scrolling on a smartphone.

"We feel pretty confident that if you never give yourself any awake downtime, you're not going to have as many of these daydream events, which may be important for brain plasticity," Andermann said.

Researchers discover wide range of risk factors for young-onset dementia

England [UK] : Researchers discovered a wide range of risk factors for young-onset dementia. The findings bring the notion that heredity is the only cause of the disease into question, paving the potential for innovative prevention measures.

The full study is entitled 'Risk factors for young-onset dementia in the UK Biobank: A prospective population-based study', published in JAMA Neurology.

The large-scale study revealed 15 risk variables for late-onset dementia, which are identical to those for Alzheimer's disease. For the first time, they suggest that by focusing on health and lifestyle variables, it may be feasible to lower the risk of young-onset dementia.

Relatively little research has been done on young-onset dementia, though globally there are around 370,000 new cases of young-onset dementia each year.

Published in JAMA Neurology, the new research by the University of Exeter and Maastricht University followed more than 350,000 participants younger than 65 across the United Kingdom from the UK Biobank study.

The team evaluated a broad array of risk factors ranging from genetic predispositions to lifestyle and environmental influences. The study revealed that lower formal education, lower socioeconomic status, genetic variation, lifestyle factors such as alcohol use disorder and social isolation, and health issues including vitamin D deficiency, depression, stroke, hearing impairment and heart disease significantly elevate risk of young-onset dementia.

Professor David Llewellyn of the University of Exeter emphasized the importance of the findings: "This breakthrough study illustrates the crucial role of international collaboration and big data in advancing our understanding of dementia. There's still much to learn in our ongoing mission to prevent, identify, and treat dementia in all its forms in a more targeted way. This is the largest and most robust study of its kind ever conducted. Excitingly, for the first time it reveals that we may be able to take action to reduce risk of this debilitating condition, through targeting a range of different factors.

Dr Stevie Hendriks, Researcher at Maastricht University, said: "Young-onset dementia has a very serious impact, because the people affected usually still have a job, children, and a busy life. The cause is often assumed to be genetic, but for many people we don't actually know exactly what the cause is. This is why we also wanted to investigate other risk factors in this study."

Sebastian Kohler, Professor of Neuroepidemiology at Maastricht University, said: "We already knew from research on people who develop dementia at older age that there are a series of modifiable risk factors. In addition to physical factors, mental health also plays an important role, including avoiding chronic stress, loneliness and depression. The fact that this is also evident in young-onset dementia came as a surprise to me, and it may offer opportunities to reduce risk in this group too." The study's support was supported by Alzheimer's Research UK, The Alan Turing Institute/Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council, Alzheimer Nederland, Gieskes Strijbis Fonds, the Medical Research Council, the National Institute for Health.

Scientists reveal a detailed cell map of the mammalian brain

WASHINGTON DC [US] : For the first time, an international team of researchers has created a full-cell atlas of a whole mammalian brain.

This atlas serves as a map of the mouse brain, describing the kind, location, and chemical information of over 32 million cells as well as information on cell connectivity.

The mouse is the most often used vertebrate experimental model in neuroscience research, and its cellular map paves the door for a better understanding of the human brain - probably the world's most powerful computer. The cell atlas also provides the groundwork for a new generation of precision treatments for those suffering from mental and neurological illnesses of the brain.

The findings were published in Nature.

"The mouse atlas has brought the intricate network of mammalian brain cells into unprecedented focus, giving researchers the details needed to understand human brain function and diseases," said Joshua A. Gordon, M.D., Ph.D., Director of the National Institute of Mental Health, part of the National Institutes of Health. The cell atlas describes the types of cells in each region of the mouse brain and their organization within those regions. In addition to this structural information, the cell atlas provides an incredibly detailed catalog of the cell's transcriptome -- the complete set of gene readouts in a cell, which contains instructions for making proteins and other cellular products.

The transcriptomic information included in the atlas is hierarchically organized, detailing cell classes, subclasses, and thousands of individual cell clusters within the brain.

The atlas also characterizes the cell epigenome -- chemical modifications to a cell's DNA and chromosomes that alter the way the cell's genetic information is expressed -- detailing thousands of epigenomic cell types and millions of candidate genetic regulation elements for different brain cell types. Together, the structural, transcriptomic, and epigenetic information included in this atlas provide an unprecedented map of cellular organization and diversity across the mouse brain.

The atlas also provides an accounting of the neurotransmitters and neuropeptides used by different cells and the relationship among cell types within the brain.

This information can be used as a detailed blueprint for how chemical signals are initiated and transmitted in different parts of the brain.

Those electrical signals are the basis for how brain circuits operate and how the brain functions overall.

"This product is a testament to the power of this unprecedented, cross-cutting collaboration and paves our path for more precision brain treatments," said John Ngai, PhD, Director of the NIH BRAIN Initiative.

Of the 10 studies included in this collection, seven are funded through the NIH BRAIN Initiative Cell Census Network (BICCN), and two are funded through the larger NIH BRAIN Initiative. The core aim of the BICCN, a groundbreaking, cross-collaborative effort to understand the brain's cellular makeup, is to develop a comprehensive inventory of the cells in the brain -- where they are, how they develop, how they work together, and how they regulate their activity -- to better understand how brain disorders develop, progress, and are best treated.

"By leveraging the unique nature of its multidisciplinary and international collaboration, the BICCN was able to accomplish what no other team of scientists has been able to before," said Dr. Ngai.

"Now we are ready to take the next big step -- completing the cell maps of the and the nonhuman primate brain."

Technology, economics might help save endangered species: Study

WASHINGTON DC : In the 50 years after the Endangered Species Act (ESA) was passed in December 1973, the world has changed drastically.

Two Ohio State University academics were among a group of experts invited by the journal Science to explore how the ESA has evolved and what its future may hold.

Tanya Berger-Wolf, faculty director of Ohio State's Translational Data Analytics Institute, led a group that wrote on "Sustainable, trustworthy, human-technology partnership."

Amy Ando, professor and chair of the university's Department of Agricultural, Environmental, and Development Economics, wrote on "Harnessing economics for effective implementation."

Berger-Wolf and her colleagues wrote, "We are in the middle of a mass extinction without even knowing all that we are losing and how fast." But technology can help address that.

For example, they note the value of tools like camera traps that survey animal species and smartphone apps that allow citizen scientists to count insects, identify bird songs and report plant observations.

New tech has allowed scientists to monitor animal and plant populations at scale for the first time, said Berger-Wolf, who is also a professor of computer science and engineering, evolution, ecology and organismal biology, and electrical and computer engineering. One challenge is to find new ways to extract all the information from these new sources of data.

"But even with all this data, we are still monitoring only a tiny fraction of the biodiversity out in the world," she said. "Without that information, we don't know what we have, how different species are doing and whether our policies to protect endangered species are working."

"We have to take into account feedback effects. People take an action, and that changes the ecosystem and that changes what people do," she said. "We need to capture those feedback effects." "Economists have been working to understand how we can coordinate landowners where we don't have to implement draconian land use regulations, but still protect habitat," Ando said. "That is a very promising tactic that can protect species and also reduce the cost to people of doing so."

Most important, Berger-Wolf said, is the need to make sure to keep humans in the process. Technology needs to connect data, connect different regions of the world, connect people to nature and connect people to people. "We don't want to sever the connection between people and nature, we want to strengthen it," she said. "We cannot rely on technology to save the world's biodiversity. It has to be an intentional partnership between humans and technology and AI."

Economics should be another partner in the fight to save endangered species, Ando said.

"There's this tendency to think that protecting endangered species is all about biology and ecology," Ando said. "But various tools in economics are very helpful in making sure the work we do to implement the Endangered Species Act is successful. That is not always obvious to people."

For example, bioeconomic research is a multidisciplinary effort between economists and biologists to work together to see how human behaviour interacts with ecological processes and systems.

The result can be novel ways to protect endangered species, such as "pop-up" habitat modification. For example, ranchers can take down fences temporarily while elk are migrating to allow them to move freely. Rice fields can be temporarily flooded during shorebird migration to give them a place to rest and feed on their travels.

We can "draw upon economics to optimize the timing, location and extent of temporary actions to maximize their net benefits to society," Ando wrote in Science. Another way economics can help is to develop policies that protect species before they become so threatened that they need ESA protection. A common issue is that multiple landowners will all need to work together to protect the habitat of threatened species. But often, if some landowners take actions to protect a species, other landowners will think they don't have to.

"Economists have been working to understand how we can coordinate landowners where we don't have to implement draconian land use regulations, but still protect habitat," Ando said.

"That is a very promising tactic that can protect species and also reduce the cost to people of doing so."

Tensions high as new violence spirals in Syria’s Suwayda despite ceasefire

MI News Service, Damascus: Druze armed groups have attacked personnel from Syria's internal security forces in the restive area of Suwayda, killing at least one government soldier and wounding others, as well as shelling several villages in the southern province, according to state-run Ekhhbariya TV. Ekhhbariya's report on Sunday quoted a security source as saying the armed groups had violated the ceasefire agreed in the predominantly Druze region, where sectarian bloodshed killed hundreds of people last month.

In response to the renewed violence, the Syrian government said in a statement that “the media and sectarian mobilisation campaigns led by the rebel gangs in the city have not ceased over the past period”. It added: “As these gangs failed to thwart the efforts of the Syrian state and its responsibilities towards our people in Suwayda, they resorted to violating the ceasefire agreement by launching treacherous attacks against internal security forces on several fronts and shelling some villages with rockets and mortar shells, resulting in the martyrdom and injury of a number of security personnel.” The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights reported four deaths in the latest violence in Suwayda, noting three were government soldiers and one was a local fighter.

Violence in Suwayda erupted on July 13 between Bedouin tribal fighters and Druze factions. Government forces were sent in to quell the fighting, but the bloodshed worsened, and Israel carried out strikes on Syrian troops, and also bombed the heart of the capital Damascus, under the pretext of protecting the Druze.

The Druze are a minority community in the region with followers in Syria, Lebanon and Israel. Suwayda province is predominantly Druze, but is also home to Bedouin tribes, and the communities have had longstanding tensions over land and other resources.

A United States-brokered truce between Israel and Syria was announced in tandem with Syria President Ahmed al-Sharaa declaring a ceasefire in Suwayda after previous failed attempts. The fighting had raged in Suwayda city and surrounding towns for nearly a week. Syria said it would investigate the clashes, setting up a committee to do so. The Suwayda bloodshed was another blow to al-Sharaa's fledgling government, after a wave of sectarian violence in March that killed hundreds of Alawite citizens in the coastal region.

Jitendra Awhad launches scathing attack on Sanatan Dharma, calls it a ‘distorted ideology’

MI News Service, New Delhi: Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) leader and MLA Jitendra Awhad stirred fresh controversy on Sunday after launching a scathing attack on Sanatan Dharma, calling it a “distorted ideology” that has historically oppressed social reformers and marginalized communities in India. While addressing journalists, Awhad alleged that Sanatan Dharma has been responsible for many regressive practices and historical injustices. “Sanatan has ruined India. It promotes orthodox and backwardness,” he said.

Highlighting historical episodes, Awhad claimed that the coronation of Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj was delayed due to the rigid beliefs propagated by Sanatan traditions. He further alleged that Chhatrapati Sambhaji Maharaj was deliberately maligned and discredited under the influence of orthodox elements. The NCP leader did not stop there. He recounted how Savitri Bai Phule, one of India's earliest women educators and social reformers, was publicly humiliated by having cow dung and filth thrown at her—something he attributed to the Sanatan mindset. He also claimed that a conspiracy to assassinate Shahu Maharaj, the progressive ruler of Kolhapur known for his efforts toward social justice, was rooted in the same ideology. “Sanatan did not allow Dr. B.R. Ambedkar to drink water or attend school. It treated him as untouchable,” Awhad said, adding that Ambedkar actively resisted Sanatan practices by burning the Manusmriti and rejecting its discriminatory customs. “Sanatan was never a religion; it is nothing more than a perverse and regressive ideology. People should not hesitate to call it out,” he declared. Awhad's remarks have sparked sharp reactions on social media and are expected to trigger political backlash, especially from right-wing groups and parties that view Sanatan Dharma as the cultural bedrock of Indian civilization. As of now, there has been no official response from the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) or Hindu religious bodies, but Awhad's statements are likely to fuel another round of heated debate around history, caste, and identity politics in the country.

ROSTON CHASE BECOMES FIRST PLAYER TO GET RETIRED OUT IN T20IS

FLORIDA [US] : West Indies batter Roston Chase on Monday became the first player to get retired out during a men's T20I featuring two Full Member teams.

This incident took place during the West Indies chase of 190 runs in the third and final T20I of the series against Pakistan, as reported by ESPNcricinfo.

The Caribbean side got to a good, brilliant start as opener Alick Athanaze scored 60 runs off 40 balls, but later, when he got dismissed, the run-rate slowed down and they were reduced to 110/3 after the completion of 13 overs.

At that moment, Sherfane Rutherford was batting along with Chase, where the latter was struggling to hit big shots, so he was retired out after scoring 15(12), which came with the help of two fours.

Team India registers narrowest Test win by runs at The Oval, outdoes their 21-year-old record

LONDON [UK] : Team India made history at The Oval, registering their narrowest Test win in terms of runs, by six runs, during the fifth and final Test against England at The Oval on Monday.

On the fifth and final day, with 35 runs still needed to get for England, pacers Mohammed Siraj and Prasidh Krishna were extremely relentless, putting pressure and every inch of their effort and body on every ball. The result was England falling short by six runs of the 374-run target, with Siraj taking a five-wicket haul and Prasidh getting four wickets.

This outdoes their 13-run win against Australia at Wankhede Stadium in 2004, which came while defending 107 runs, and they skittled out Aussies for 93 runs, with Murali Karthik taking seven wickets in the match to walk away with the 'Player of the Match' honours. This is the first time India has won the 5th match of a Test series away from home.

After England opted to bowl first, they reduced India to 153/6. A 58-run partnership between Karun Nair (57 in 109 balls, with eight fours) and Washington Sundar (26 in 55 balls, with three fours) was the most meaningful part of the inning as India was bundled out for 224 runs. Apart from Gus Atkinson's five-wicket haul, Josh Tongue (3/57) was also good.

In the second innings, four-fers from Siraj (4/86) and Prasidh Krishna (4/62) reduced England to 247, despite a 92-run opening stand between Zak Crawley (64 in 57 balls, with 14 fours) and Ben Duckett (43 in 38 balls, with five fours and two sixes) and a fifty by Harry Brook (53 in 64 balls, with five fours and a six). They led by 23 runs.

In India's second innings, key contributions came from Yashviji Jaiswal (118 in 164 balls, with 14 fours and two sixes), Akash Deep (66 in 94 balls, with 12 fours), Ravindra Jadeja (53 in 77 balls, with five fours) and Washington Sundar (53 in 46 balls, with four boundaries and four sixes). Sundar stitched a very crucial 10th wicket stand with Krishna, with the latter scoring nothing out of it and Sundar doing all the hitting.

They all took India to 396 runs, giving them a 373-run lead and setting a target of 374 runs for England to win the series.

India started well, reducing England to 106/3. However, fine centuries from Harry Brook (111 in 98 balls, with 14 fours and two sixes) and Joe Root (105 in 152 balls, with 12 fours) troubled India with a 195-run stand for the fourth wicket. At one point, England was 317/4 on day four. However, a late surge by Siraj (5/104) and Krishna (4/126) shifted the pressure to England, and they were left six runs short, bundled out for 367 runs.

The series is drawn 2-2, reflecting the true nature of how well-fought the series was. The Shubman Gill era has started with immense promise and fight, giving signs of a bright future.

Siraj breaks silence on costly fielding blunder, reveals despite setback, still had belief to win it for India

LONDON [UK] : Mohammed Siraj broke the silence about his costly fielding blunder, which gave an unprecedented lifeline to Harry Brook on Day 4 of the final Test against England. Despite the catastrophic "game-changing" moment, Siraj revealed that he woke up with a sense of belief in himself to finish the job for the team, which he eventually did.

On the fourth day at The Oval, Brook and Joe Root started to threaten India's dominance by orchestrating a fierce riposte in their pursuit of a 374-run target. Prasidh Krishna offered a way out for India to avoid the misery that Brook was capable of unleashing while relying on his skillset.

Brook top-edged his pull the first delivery of the 35th over, and Prasidh started celebrating as soon as the ball shot sky high. Siraj arrived at the landing position and completed the catch. However, to his and India's agony, he took a step back and touched the boundary rope, turning the wicket-taking delivery into a maximum.

He sunk his face in his hands, trying to fathom the gravity of his mistake. After being dropped on 19, Brook made the most of the second wind and blazed his way to a swash-buckling 111 from 98 deliveries before he ballooned the ball to Siraj off Akash Deep. In the second instance, Siraj didn't allow history to repeat itself and pouched the ball safely.

"To be honest, I didn't think that I would take the (Brook) catch and step on the rope. It was a match-changing moment. Yes, I always believed myself that I will do it for the team," Siraj said while speaking to Sky Sports after the match.

"If I had taken that (Brook) catch properly, probably we may not have had to come today. But Brook played really well," he continued during the post-match presentation.

After the end of a 195-run partnership,

'Miyaan Magic' brought the thunder down on the ground in London and delivered a performance that will be remembered for ages. While sticking to his plan of hitting the right areas, Siraj always had faith in himself. He even took a screenshot from the internet, which suggested 'to believe', spurring him to bring it out on the field.

"To be honest, it is so amazing. From day one to here, everyone fought so hard, so we are very happy. I just wanted to make sure I hit the right areas, the wickets would fall, and anything else would be a bonus. When I woke up, I believed I could do it. I took a screenshot of something on Google that said believe because I wanted to put it out there today," Siraj said in the post-match presentation, after being adjudged the Player of the Match.

After rain forced a premature end to the action on the fourth day, India stood four wickets to level the series while England just had to pile up 35 runs to gun down the daunting total. In the opening hour, Siraj breathed fire, bowled in tandem with Prasidh, and put the final nail in the coffin.

On his 1,113th delivery of the series, he nailed the yorker and rattled the timber to get India past the finishing line with a narrow six-run triumph, finishing with a sizzling five-for in the second innings and overall match figures 9/190.

In reply, while chasing 190 runs, West Indies openers Alick Athanaze and Jerlani Andrew also gave their team a flying start, adding 44 runs for the opening wicket before Harris Rauf dismissed Andrew for 24 in the 5th over. Skipper Shai Hope's run drought with the bat continued as he was dismissed for seven by Mohammad Nawaz in the 9th over.

Athanaze brought up his maiden T20I fifty in the 11th over, he added 10 more runs to his total before Ayub removed him for 60 in the following over. Roston Chase made 15 but failed to get going and retired with 41 runs left to win in 18 balls for West Indies.

Sherfane Rutherford made a vital fifty off 35 runs and tried to get his side over the line, but the home side eventually fell 13 runs short of the target. (ANI) adding 47 runs without any loss in the powerplay.

They continued to build on the momentum and extended Pakistan's dominance by taking the team's total to 82 without loss at mid-way through the innings as Farhan completed his third T20I half-century.

Ayub joined his partner and completed his second T20I fifty, bringing up the 100-run opening stand for Pakistan. The duo added 138 runs for the opening wicket before Shamar Joseph removed Farhan for 74 in the 17th over.

Hasan Nawaz played a couple of big shots before losing his wicket to Roston Chase, followed by Harris getting himself run out as West Indies made a comeback in the match. Khushdil Shah and Faheem Ashraf slammed 19 runs in the final over as Pakistan finished their innings at 189/4.
